Information about the event

The World Food Day

The World Food Day is celebrated worldwide on October 16 to promote action for global food security. It marks the day on which in 1946, the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations was founded.

The University of Hohenheim has a long-term commitment to research and teaching on food and nutrition security in the Global South. Therefore, we celebrate World Food Day with a public event that features presentations by internationally renowned speakers as well as young perspectives. The topic of our World Food Day event this year is Building Sustainable and Resilient Agri-Food Systems.

The Justus-von-Liebig Award for World Nutrition

As part of this year's World Food Day event, we are pleased to host the ceremony where the Justus-von-Liebig Award for World Nutrition will be given to Dr. Agnes Kalibata, the President of AGRA. AGRA is an African-led organization committed to "Sustainably Growing Africa's Food Systems." (<https://agra.org/>)

Dr. Agnes Kalibata

The Justus-von-Liebig Award for World Nutrition, which is endowed with 25,000 Euro, is awarded every two years by the Foundation fiat panis to internationally renowned individuals or institutions who have made an outstanding contribution to the improvement of the world nutrition.

Financial Support of the event by the Foundation fiat panis is gratefully acknowledged.
